Niki (20) studies computer science, but she has also worked as an app designer for the past two years. We're meeting her in a café to talk about what it's like to design apps.

How did you start designing apps?

When I was in high school, I was a volunteer at an animal shelter. We were thinking about how to make people adopt homeless animals. I thought about a mobile matching app for dogs and people. You know, you fill in a form about your lifestyle and what kind of dog you'd like to adopt, and then you get a matching dog. As it was quite an expensive thing to produce, I decided to do it myself.

Did you have the necessary skills?

Generally, I was interested in computer programming, but I had to learn app designing. So, for a start, I went to my brother, who's an IT specialist, and he taught me the basics. And so, I designed my app in a year. It's a great success and over a hundred dogs have found homes since then.

Congratulations! And what are the advantages of being an app designer?

First of all, you make things. Any job where you can be creative is usually satisfying. Also, it's an amazing feeling to know that thousands of people are using the thing that you have created. And my grandma Sophia is really proud of me too.

Do you have to sit in an office?

It depends on your employer really, but I'm lucky I can work from anywhere. What's more, I work flexible hours. It's convenient because I'm a morning person and the best time to work for me is from 6 a.m.

Have you ever dreamt about being an app designer?

Hi Mike,

I've just read an interesting interview with Niki, an (1)  and I thought I could become one myself.

The job gives her a lot of freedom, which I like. It took Niki (2)  to design her first app. It has helped (3)  to find new homes. Do you think I could learn app designing? I've found a course online that costs (4)  and lasts

(5) . Let me know what you think about it.
